isian Barber Who Does Not Desire Their Custom. "Victor Hugo was once one of your patrons, I believe," said a French writer, M. Planche, to Brassier, a barber of Paris. "Alas! yes," answered the barber. The word and the accent surprised the inquirer.

"Was it not agreeable, then, to have the greatest man in France—the greatest poet of his century, perhaps—for a customer?" The barber shrugged his shoulders. "Ah, monsieur, it is one of the worst things that can happen to you, to have a great man for a customer. You see, they are not like other men." Then, in order to justify his paradox, he related a chapter of personal experience.

"One day a great lady, Mme. de X—, whose hair I had dressed, and who was much pleased with my work, said she would recommend me to thirty or more of her friends; and in a day or two she sent me a paper containing all the names and addresses of these people, with her recommendation of me at the bottom."

"The recommendation of Mme. de X—I why, that was as good as a fortune to you, my good man," said M. Planche.

"It might have been, sir, but for M. Viomy good man," said M. Planche.

"It might have been, sir, but for M. Victor Hugo. He was here the day I received it; he had sat down in the very chair you are sitting in now. I had just put a towel round his neck, when he seemed to be seized with some great thought and beckned me to let him alone. He drew a pencil from his pocket, took a sheet of paper from this table here and began writing.
"He had been writing about five minutes."

"He had been writing about five minutes when another oustomer came in. My men were all busy, so, seeing that M. Hugo had stopped writing to sharpen his pencil, I stepped up to him and said:

stepped up to him and said:

"'M. Hugo, if you will permit me to begin with you—I am in a hurry.'

"'Um! I'm in a hurry, too,' said he.

"Then he got up all at once, paper and pencil in hand, and started out of the shop. I called after him that he had the towel round his neck, and he took it off. But I didn't mind the paper, because I didn't

'It was so. I rushed away to M. Hugo's house to recover the precious paper.

"'Ah, yes,' he said, 'I remember; I had no sooner got into the house than I had another and much better idea, and as I had, therefore, no further need of your paper,

MARVELOUS COURAGE.

Unparalleled Coolness of an Innocent Man on the Gallows. In a handsome mansion situated in a In a handsome mansion situated in a lonely part of England there resided, a few years ago, a maiden lady of considerable wealth, writes a correspondent of the Philadelphia Press. One morning she was discovered foully murdered. Her manservant, named Lce, was suspected, arrested and convicted on circumstantial evidence, and sentenced to be hanged. So evidence, and sentenced to be hanged. evidence, and sentenced to be nanged. So conclusive seemed the evidence against the prisoner that no attempt whatever was made on the part of the public to induce the Home Secretary to exercise executive clemency. The day of the execution having arrived, the prisoner was led forth to suffer the extreme penalty. The rope to be used, the texture of which was silk and hemp, had been, as is customary in such cases, tested with the aid of sand-bags, and was not found wanting The bolt was drawn and the prisoner was given a drop of eight feet. The rope broke. The prisoner walked, unaided, up the steps leading to the scaffold, and after the rope had been fixed again and the noose adjusted the bolt was drawn for the second time. The rope broke again. Lee was by this time considerably stunned. However, after the lapse of a few moments he again ascended, unaided, the steps, and after doing all in his power to allay the nervousness of the hangman, assisted the latter in once more fixing the rope. The prisoner placed himself on the trap-door, the boit was pulled, and the condemned man dropped once more out of view. The rope parted for the third time. After considerable delay Lee once more placed himself into the executioner's hands, but that personage and the other officials, horrified at what seemed a Divine interposition, refused to proceed further with the business. The facts were reported to the Home Secretary, who at once respited the to allay the nervousness of the hangman

Home Secretary, who at once respited the prisoner, condemning him to imprisonment for life. Three years later a woman who was Lee's fellow-servant confessed on her dying bed that it was she who killed her mistress. She declared that Lee had no connection whatever with the affair, and stated facts strongly confirmatory to her

Instances may possibly have occurred in which an equal amount of physical courage has been displayed, but outside of the pale of fiction there can not be cited a single case in which bravery ever played a more conspicuous part than in the incident above detailed.

Impracticable People.

We may, with very little inquietude, see a man persist in a project which he has found to be impracticable—live in an inconvenient house because it was contrived by himself, or wear a coat of a particular cut in hopes by perseverance to bring it into fashion. These are indeed follies; but they are only follies, and however wild or ridiculous, can very little affect others. Indeed, the folly of persisting in impracticable ideas is generally visited only on ourselves.

BEATING A TAVERN. But It Was Clear Waste, for the Bill Had Already Been Settled.

One afternoon in 1872 I entered the village of L-, in Missouri, as dead broke as the poorest tramp on the highway, writes an ex-barn-stormer in the New York Sun. I had already walked thirty miles, and had I had already walked thirty miles, and had fifteen more to go before I could hope to find friends and raise money. I had been out with a barn-storming theatrical company, and had got left. Watch, rings and every thing but the clothes in which I stood had already gone, and I knew that I must beat the hotel or take lodgings in a fence corner. I might tell my take of weet to the corner. I might tell my tale of woe to the landlord in vain. He probably heard a hundred of such in the course of the year. Therefore, as I entered the village I determined to give Boniface the grand stand-off n good shape. Just before reaching the notel I picked a child out of the street just noted picked a child out of the street just in time to save it from being trampled under the feet of a runaway team, but I handed it over to a store-keeper without a dozen words in regard to the incident.

It was a fair village tavern, and I asked for the best room in the house. After a good supper I got half a dozen cigars on tick, and at ten colock went to my room and turned to the store of the same at the colock went to my room and turned. at ten o'clock went to my room and turned in and slept like a top until an hour before daybreak. Then I got up, quietly dressed myself, slipped down stairs and out of the front door and started off. After "hoofing it" for about four miles I sat down to rest, and was about ready to move on again, when a buggy in which my landlord was seated drove up. 1 went down in my boots at once, supposing, of course, he had fol-lowed to arrest me, but as he drew rein he

the country and left me with twenty dollars PRECOCIOUS CHILDREN.

Boy Who Could Speak Three Lan guages When Four Years Old. John Philip Baratier was born at Schwo-bach, in the margravate of Anspach, in 1721. At the age of four, states a writer in Notes and Queries, he conversed with his mother in French, his father in Latin and his servants in German. In his eleventh year he translated "The Travels of the Rabbi Ben jamin of Tudela" from Hebrew into French. He was elected a member of the Royal Academy of Science at Berlin, and was of-fered the degree of M. A. at the Halle University, to which he was admitted on draw-ing up and defending fourteen theses in philosophy and the mathematics (1735). He died at the early age of nine een.

Another marvelous child was Christian Henry Heinecker, who was born at Lubeck, February 6, 1721—just twenty-seven days after Baratier first saw the light of day. He could recite the principal facts in the "Pentateuch" when but one year old; the entire history of the old and new testament was familiar to him at fourteen months; at two and one-half years he could answer the principal questions in ancient and mod-ern history and at five he died.

Goethe is said to have known German French, Italia was eight. On January 20, 1889, the New York Sun gave an account of a little negro -Oscar Moore-who knew all of Appleton's "Encyclopedia" by heart and could recite any thing he had ever heard.

Melancholy Adventure Which Befell a Couple of Selfish Passengers.

Railway pigs do not always secure happiness for themselves by making their fellow passengers comfortable, writes a Boston correspondent. A friend of your corre-spondent chanced to witness a melancholy adventure which befell two of the breed on a suburban train the other day. Pig No. 1 was unjustifiably occupying two seats while other people were compelled to stand for want of sitting room. To keep the second place at his side he had deposited thereon a good-sized paper bag full of something. The train drew up at a station on its way into town and pig No. 2 entered the car with a slam. Pig No. 1 was a selfish pig, whereas aslam. Fig No. 1 was a selfish pig, whereas pig No. 2 was an aggressive pig. Both varieties are only too familiar. Now ensued a tragedy in one act. Pig No. 2 made his way along the aisie until he came to the bench occupied by pig No. 1 for the accommodation of himself and his paper tag. Then he paused and glared. Doubtless if he had asked pig No. 1 to remove the offending parcel and make room for him, pig No. 1 would have acquiesced and all would have been peaceful and lovely. Pig No. 2, however, did not choose to make any such polite request. He simply spread his coat-tails and sat down upon the paper bag with the ponderous emphasis of about 180 pounds avoirdupois. Squash! Pigs Nos. 1 and 2 leaped to their feet simultaneously. On the countenance of the former was an expression of pardonable anger, on that of the latter were written emotions of horror and alarm. At the same time the passengers alarm. At the same time the passengers near by observed that pig No. 2 was literally covered as to his rear with a fluid of chrome yellow tint, which trickled down the legs of his trousers to the floor. The seat he had so suddenly vacated was a pud-

"Sir!" exclaimed pig No. 1, wrathfully, "how dare you smash my eggs!"
"Jackass!" replied pig No. 2, with equal heat, "what do you mean by setting a trap with your infernal hen fruit for decent with your infernal hen fruit for decent people to sit down upon?"

"Two dozen and & half, fresh laid," said pig No. 1. "Pll thank you to pay me for them."
"A brand new pair of fourteen dollar pantaloons," rejoined pig No. 2. "Replace them or fight."

them or fight."

It was the brakeman who interfered and put an untimely stop to what promised to be an unusually interesting scrimmage. And at the last view the writer's friend had of the combatants, as the train came to a full stop in the Boston depot, pig No. 1 was leaving the car breathing awful threats of action for assault, while pig No. 2 was being wiped off with newspapers by the brakeman aforesaid. Most of the passengers, strange to say, appeared to be grieved that the two had not been permitted to wipe each other out unmolested. There are plenty of rallway pigs to spare in these parts.

A New departure in social shams is to be made this summer. A certain claim agent says he has a contract to place the names of a New York woman and her daughters on all the fashionable hotel registers at the most famous resorts in Europe, care being taken to register at only one place at a time. The names will then be cabled to a New York paper as among the latest arrivals at London, Paris, Rome or Venice, as the case may be, while the owners of the names will be in hiding at some cheap country boarding house. Queer mortals who can find a satisfactory recompense in this sort of thing.

JOHN H. Locke was recently appointed Postmaster at Portsmouth, N. H. He died soon after from an illness caused partially by esting strawberries and partially by excitement over his good fortune There is a warning here to office-seekers When you receive your commission do not recklessly rush off to a restaurant and give way to the strawberry habit. It is hardly more dangerous to drown your joy in the flowing bowl.

CLAUS SPRECKELS has not forgotten his old cunning when he promised the Reading Board of Trade a sugar refinery i the farmers in that vicinity should plant 50,000 acres of sugar beets. If Mr. Spreckels has no competitor in his new field, and if he keeps on promising to other Boards of Trade, he will undoubtedly be the richest man living before he dies.

THE Iowa Supreme Court, in a recent decision, expressed the opinion that girls who habitually gad about the streets late at night have no valid claim on the Courts for redress if they are ruined. That ruling may seem severe, but it is based on a law that is older than any human enactment.

Red Nosed Mike" Goes Through the Scuttle-Prepared to Meet

WILKESBARRE, June 25 .- Michael Rizzelo. alias "Red Nosed Mike," was hanged at 10 o'clock this morning. The crime for which he paid the penalty was committed October 19, 1888 J. B. McClure, paymaster for contractor Charles McFadden, accompanied by Hugh Flannigan, a stable boss, was driving from Wilkesbarre to the railroad camp above Miner's mills with $12,000, intended to pay off the workmen. Michael Rizzelo, Guisipi Bevi-reno and Gincenzo Vallalli lay in wait reno and Gincenzo Vallalli lay in wait on the lonely mountain road expecting the arrival of McClure and Flaunigan Upon their approach Rizzelo fired three shots into Flannigan, killing him. Bevireno shot McClure, killing him. Although Mike and his companions were suspected and arrested, they were discharged and soon after left the city, going to Ponghkeepsie, taking along their plunder, $12,000. Bevireno a d Vallalli subsequently escaped to Italy with their booty Later evidence was secured which led to Mike's arrest and conviction.

Rizzelo's last night on earth was spent in prayer. He refused to partake of breakfast, taking only a cup of milk. He said be was ready and to hurry his work without any delay, as he was prepared to die. He was courageous to the last. His neck was not broken, and he died hard of strangulation.

from Cardinal Gibbons:

RESPECTED AND DEAR SIR: In reply to your favor of the 9th ult. I beg to say, as far as my opportunities enable me to judge, it is the general sentiment of our thoughtful American people that the treatment of political prisoners in Ireland has been exceedingly harsh and wantonly severe, and in that view I am compelled to concur. But I hope this subject is but a passing episode soon to be forgotton, or at least condoned, in view of the blessing of home rule, and the privilege of authority in domestic affairs within your grasp. I trust the friendly relation between England and Ireland will increase every day and that long, unnatcrease every day and that long, unnatural and disastrous conflict will give place to honorable emulation in the field of commerce and industry such as happily exists among the States of our federal union.

The husband died March 20; one child April 24, and the other May 26. After her arrest the woman made a hear from the agent in a day or two full confession, detailing the agonies as he would go to Manzanelli and teleher little ones suffered as she slowly poisoned them; her sweet faced daughter aged nine years lingering in excruciating pain for three days. The aggregate insurance recovered for the three nurclers was less than $400.

Mrs. Whiteling's bearing throughout the terrible ordeal was a most remarkable exhibition of fortitude and resignation to her fate. During the entire morning she never for a moment showed the slightest evidence of weakness, but she frequently expressed her pleasure at the prospect of meeting her husband and children.

the German National Turnersbund notable affair. It will end in Wood Park, where a picnic will be held, and the awards of prizes will be made known. The whole line of march has been profusely decorated with national flags, and great quantities of national colors formed the principal part of the decoration. There is a notable absence of German colors, which, on former occasions, were much more conspicu ous. The parade formed in six divis-ions. The first two contained mem-bers of the various "Turn Circuits" present; the third was made up of 1.600 turners; the fourth of local military organizations; the fifth of Maen-nerchors and singing societies; sixth of turners' associations. THE SCHOOL FOR GIBLS.

the Seminary and Opera House -An Interesting Program. Many friends of the School for Girls assembled at the seminary last e ening to listen to the interesting program presented. The entertainment opened with an elocution contest. in which "Miles Standish" was ren dered by a number of young ladies dressed in the costume of the Puritans. Miles Standish was represented by Miss Maggie Mayberry, who wore an immense black beard and knee breeches. Aside from being somewhat embarrassed at the beginning, she sustained the character quite well. Miss Blanche Pinniger sustained the character of "John Alden," the lover, exceptionally well, while Miss Maud Wells took the part of "Priscilla" in a highly satisfactory manner. The other characters were taken by Miss Ruth

Russell, Miss Helen Durant and Miss Dollie Rule.

The "Settlers Story," as told by Miss Minnie Kinkead was a gem, and showed that young lady to have a correct knowledge of elocution. "The Polish Boy," as recited by Miss May Hopkins, was also good.

The "Irish Woman's Letter," by Miss Farms Hunt, was expellent.

Miss Emma Hunt, was excellent. Miss Vesta Rice's recitationmedley—proved that young lady to be well up in rhetoric, as well as elocu-tion, and was heartily encored. It lady graduates at the Opera House this afternoon, and the program was attentively listened to.

The exercises opened with a gymnastic performance by the woung ladies that was really fine and elicited much applause. The Indian club drill was also good. The salutatory by Miss Vesta Rice was a well-written paper and highly spoken of by all those present.

The essay of Miss Edna Mason "Esse Quam Videri"—to be, rather than to seem—was also good, and showed that young lady to be familiar with the subject.

The Class History written and read by Miss Susie Shoemaker was well worth hearing.

The Latin poem by Miss Emma Blauvelt, "Horatii Carmen," the Ga-ZETTE takes for granted as good, but not being up in Latin we beg to be excused.

The essay by Miss Mary Hopkins "The Hill of Knowledge" was well written and exemplified the fact that Miss Hopkins was climbing up the hill and making rapid strides towards a perfect education. a perfect education.

The Class Prophecy by Miss Louise

Lewis was quite original and well read. The battallion drill by the gymnastic class was perfection itself. The atti-tudes of "Sorrow," "Joy" and "Ex-pectation" were graceful and excited nuch enthusiasm:

The valedictory by Miss Augustine read with much feeling.

After the exercises Miss Eva Quaiffe gave an exhibition of her skill on the piane that was most heartily enjoyed by all present. One who could not be entertained by Miss Quaiffe's musical genius would indeed be hard to please.

This evening the thirtieth rehearsal in the Department of Music will take place under the direction of Miss Quaiffe, which is all that is necessary to be said to insure a full house.

Mortality Among the Indians. Agent Sears informs the GAZETTE that many Indians on the Reservation turned up their toes last winter. Pneumonia was the principal cause of death, as they would not allow anyone to treat them except the Indian doctor, who don't know any more about pneumonia than he does about the Garden of Eden.

Bitten by a Rattlesnake. An Indian at the Reservation who claims to be a snake-charmer pulled a rattlesnake out of his hole and got bit on the finger for his trouble. Whisky was given him in large quantities un-til he became very drunk and the chances are that he will pull through, but he is still a very sick Indian.

THE BUSY BEE.

They Take Possession of a Farm-Recoming a Nuisance in Town

The common honey bee has been for ages recognized as the symbol of industry and as such has been protected. and the honey produced in this county has been so superior in quality that it has distanced all competitors, having taken first premiums at the different World's Fairs where it has been exhibited. Until recently it has never occurred to any one that, owing to the wonderful fecundity of the bee, is might become a nuisance. If you desire to make the atmosphere sulphurous and excite a man to that degree that he is ready to fight John L. Sullivan, you have only to mention "bees" to Rufus Kinney. The bees have literally taken possession of Mr. Kinney's residence, transforming it into a vast apiary and compelling the family to vacate portions of the house. Every accessible part of the house is filled with bees; the walls are transformed into hives and at least a dozen colonies have lodged themselves under the building. The chambers are alive with them and the pugnacious little rascals dispute with the owners every part of the house from cellar to garret. A. Lyman and many others in town.

The Ten Largest Brewerles. There are ten breweries in the world which sell more than 2,500,000 barrels of beer each year. Five of these are located in the United States and five in Europe. The very largest of the ten is the Anhevser-Busch at St. Louis, which sells 455,103 barrels a year. Two of the five are in Milwaukee, one in New York and one in Philadelphia. The St. Louis brewery employs 2,200 men and consumes nually 1,220,000 bushels of barley.

DIAMONDS.

Watches and Diamonds-Found in Teas and Coffee-A Sovel Way In Dress Goods. of Introducing Goods.

The names of all persons finding diamonds, watches, etc., are added to this list daily. The Overland Tea Company have refitted the store formerly occupied by S. M. Jamison, and in order to introduce their goods, this company put for thirty days, souvenirs in every can of tea and coffee sold, such as solid gold, silver and nickel watches. Also genuine diamonds in solid gold setting; also money and many other articles of less value. Every can contains a souvenir. The coffee, can and contents weigh about three pounds; tea, can and contents about one and one-half pounds. This expensive and novel way of advertis-ing will be discentinued after thirty days, and these realy choice goods will be sold strictly on their merits, but without the souvenir. Of course every purchaser must not expect to get a diamond or watch. This company claim that they have just as good a right to give away watches, diamonds or other jewelry and money, as their competiors have to give away glassware, chromos, etc. Get up a club. Those who get up a club order most always get a handsome present. Orders by mail promptly forwarded to all parts of the United States on receipt of cash or postoffice order. A WOMAN'S WAY.

A Startling Business Proposition. When Mrs. Fowler, of 327 Ellis street, stop ped in at a leading city druggist's to ask what effect "The California Remedy," Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla, would have in cases of dyspepsia and sick headaches, she was assured it would relieve both. She was so incredulous that the druggist gave her a bottle, not to be paid for unless it effected a cure

The following is the convincing conclusions San Francisco, February 8, 18882 DEAR SIR: Notwithstanding my misgivings, Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla did all that you promised. I had tried so many prescrip-tions that I had come to believe nothing would relieve my dyspepsia and sick head-aches, but I have not had a return of either since. I believe I am permanently cured. You have my permission to make this public, for a remedy that will cure dyspepsia and prevent sick headaches should be generally known. Respectfully, Despite his robust philosophy, that had long been the admiration and emulation of his century, M. Theodore felt himself drift-ing into melanghy and a second ing into melancholy mixed with anger.

"Nine murders, one after the other: nine crimes without an author; nonsense! impossible!" The cast de surete pulled him-self together, threw back his head like a war horse sniffing battle, and—the door opened.

It was his secretary who presented himself, bearing a card in his fingers.

"A gentleman, monsieur, who insists upon seeing you. He declares" and the secretary smiled a little at the absurdity of the claim—"he declares himself in a position to furnish you with definite particulars regarding the crime of yesterday."

and handed it to the secretary who returned at the moment ushering in the visiter who had asked to see him, dismissed him with a M. Theodore raised his eyes. Before him was a man simply, but neatly, clothed, and with a frank and honest countenance, though vailed, as by a cloud, with sadness. The eyes were clear and open, the mustache and goatee gray and pointed; in short, there was something in his manner, something in his whole appearance of a militaire in "retreat."

"You have particulars to give me, have you not, monsieur?" questioned the chef de surete; "particulars, I believe of the orime of yesterday.

"I hope so, monsieur," simply responded the visitor.
"Ah, hope so! You are not sure, then?"

"Ah, hope so! You are not sure, then?"
"It rests with you, M. le Chef, whether I am sure or not. All depends, in fact, upon an operation the means of which you alone are able to furnish me."
"Explain, if you please?"
"Certainly, and at once though doubtless you have heard it spoken of. M. le Chef, a certain actiontific procedure, which promise."

you have neared to spoten to, and the certain scientific procedure which permits under certain conditions, better even than description can do it, a reconstitution of the portrait of an assassin. Briefly, behold my meaning. You know, of course, "he continued, "that in the phenomenon called vision the object which we see throws or forms upon a screen in the eyeball itself forms upon a screen in the eyeball itself—in plain words, upon the retina of the eyean image which remains there until displaced by another. It has been proved also that this image persists even after death.
You recognize, therefore, that if a personmurdered has been struck from the front, and in a light sufficiently distinct for him to see, the last thing upon which his eyes would be fixed would in all probability be the face or form of the murderer. Naturally, the image of that face or figure would be thrown upon the retina of the eye where—and this is what I came to say—it is not only

"You are named Frederick Bouscal, are you not, monsiour?" he demanded, presently, addressing his visitor.

"Yes, M. le Chef, Frederick Bouscal."

"Yes, M. le Chef, Frederick Bousca."

"your age?"

"Fifty-eight years, M. le Chef."

"Hum-m-m." M. Theodore rapidly twirled the sheets beside him; "twenty-seven years?" he murmured, as if thingaing aioud. "So it was not you then who was imprisoned two years ago, and condemned for contumacy and the theft of a thousand.

His voice was choked. He was silent, unable, evidently, to go on.

"Pardon me, monsieur," said the chef de surete, "I have reopened a painful wound, but—I listen to you—you were saying?"

The man passed his hand across his brow and eyes to clear his vision, then resumed:

"I was saying, M. le Chef, that in the case which occupies us now the reconstitution of the assassin's portrait should be entirely possible. The victim was struck in the face, the direction of the blow and the form of the wound indicates it plainly. More than this, it must have been light More than this, it must have been light enough to see the murderer, and with sufficient clearness to have stamped his like-ness upon the retinal screen, for the papers assert that even in death her eyes were fixed in a wide and frightened stare. Thus, monsieur, we find ourselves in the presence of a half-certainty; it is probable, if not sure, that the eye of the corpse lying now upon the slab of the morgue contains the exact reproduction of the features of the one you seek. With your permission I will draw it from them."

'Draw it; but how?" "By photography—it is my business, M. le Chef. And this matter, this subject I speak of, I have studied it long and almost with passion, for I hold it to be, in case of success, one of the most useful and beautisuccess, one of the most useful and beautiful applications of modern science. I know it can be done, I have myself experimented, and in one instance have reproduced the lineaments of the physician who had leaned above the bed of the dying."

The man spoke with animation, and while speaking his voice vibrated, his eyes burned, his who countenance was illumi-nated, irradiated with the light of a legiti-mate pride. M. Theodore regarded him, visibly moved himself by this ardent con-

"I conclude—but authorize me to attempt "I conclude—but authorize me to attempt the experiment on the woman assassinated yesterday and I will tell you what I conclude. If I succeed it will be for us—my wife and me—a little glory, and also a little money—a ray of hope in our misery; if I fail—well, no matter—we are used to misfortune. A deception, more or less, need not be counted. In any event, M. le Chef, you lose nothing in the adventure but the you lose nothing in the adventure but the chance of an unhoped for success."

"Then, so be it, monsieur," agreed the chef de surete. "Take your instruments to the morgue to-morrow morning at ten o'clock. I will see that the clerk is instructed. Later on I shall myself be there. I have the honor, monsieur, to wish you ood-morning."

In the obscure nook at the morgue where he had inclosed himself in accordance with the arrangement made at the office of the surete Frederick Bouscal, his body bent, his face drawn, watched anxiously the re-sult of his last washing. The plate was there before him in its bath of quicksilver, into which he had dropped it awhile ago with such fear and infinite precaution. Sensitivized? Vitalized? At least it should be, and if the conditions of the crime were be, and it the conditions of the crime were such as he supposed them, and the victim before dying had really seen her murderer's face, the portrait of the assassin would be there under that bed of gelatine en traine to melt away.

He rose, that poor, trembling photographer, rose, I say, took it carefully by its dripping edges, that plate upon which his fate was hanging, half closed his eyes held it to the single ray of light that filtered through the yellowed pane—to stagger back with a groan of anguish, to let it crash into a thousand pieces!
"His son! Great God! The face of the Five minutes later, when Frederick Bouseal, the photographer, came from his nouk, and the chef de surete, awaiting him with impatience, hurried to meet his saw immediately by the pallor of his face by his somber eyes, that he had nothing good to announce to him.

"Well," said he, "nothing?"
"No," responded Bouscal, "nothing."
"Allons! no matter; try it a second time; do it over again."
"Impossible! the transparency of the cornea is destroyed. I wished to wash it, and I burned it through mistake in the vials. I salute you, M. le Chef!" And Frederick Bouscal turned away.

The next morning the commissioner of the quarter of Ternes, forwarding to the prefecture his regular report, headed it with the following item:

"To-day at ten o'clock a summons to 109 Rue Laugiere. A call from the concierge, suspicions of charcoal fumes from the room of the Bouscals, man and wife, his locataires. The door, by my order, was forced. Too late—they were dead, both of them, side by side upon the bed, a brazier of lighted charcoal plainly indicating the manner of their death. A double suicide—

"From — Commissaire, quarter of Ternes, third month, 16th day, 188—."

"Bah, these inventors!" murmured M. "Bah, these inventors?" murmpred M. Theodore, as his secretary concluded the reading, "they are all alike, stupid and rash! though I, too, on this occasion, have naught to boast of. But how the deuce," he added, as the memory of that pate, sad face rose up before him, "how the deuce could I think of suicide for a cause as trifling as this?" as this?"

"A cause as trifling as this?"
Ah, my worthy chef de surete, it is not every thing that is known in that prefecture of thine!—Translated from the French by E.C. Waggener.

Taken for a Tramp.

Dr. Dunning laughs at a joke that befell his friend, Rev. Edward Everett Hate, not long ago. Dr. Hale was making one of his long pedestrian tours through a rural region, and became very hungry. Calling at the door of a farm-honse, he asked the woman if she would let him have some-thing to eat. She looked over his tall, robust figure, and then answered in a slightly contemptuous tone: "Yes, I'll give you something to eat; but a man as big and strong and as able to work as you are ought to be ashamed of tramping and begging around the country!"

Snow-White Mocking-Bird Snow-White Mocking-Bird.

Henry Chubo, proprietor of the Vienna bakery, Burlington, Ia., has in his store a curosity in the shape of a mocking-bird that has changed its color from a dark gray to a pure white. The bird was brought from Texas about a year ago. He has always been a vigorous fellow and is a remarkably fine singer. A little less than a month ago he began to shed his feathers and turned gradually from a very dark gray to a snow white. His bill, which was black, is now as white as marble. He still seems vigorous, and hundreds throng the place daily to ous, and hundreds throng the place da ewing Machine ..... 20 0 The Bulletin is the leading evening journal in circulation and influence on the Pacific cast. It is distinuished for the brilliancy of its editorial matter, accuracy and completeness of its local news, reviews of current-literature and art, and extent of foreign news, while it is the recognized authority in all financial and trade circles. The Daily Butletin is the only newspaper in California that publishes in ext. aso the decisions of the Su-

History of France.....

Owing to the difference in time between san Francisco and the principal news centers in the East, the world's news of each day is furnished by the Balletin 13 hours in advance of the morning papers. The Weekly Bulletin is a handsome 12 page, 96 column paper, issued every Wednesday morning—the largest and best weekly published in the West. It furnishes the latest and most reliable finan-lal news and market quotations, and gives special attention to agricultural and horticultur i new, and is in every respect a first class family paper, appeal-ing to the interest of every member of the household. The Semi-Weekly Bulletin is the regular Weekly Bulletin and Fri-day's issue of each week.
